Handchimes Handbells Alternate Bells

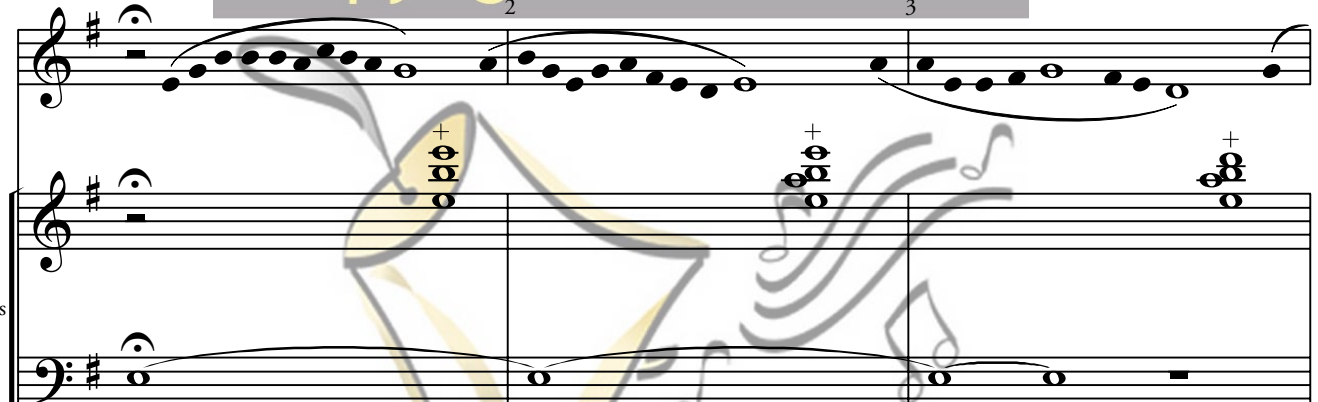

The image shows three staves of musical notation. The first staff is labeled 'Handchimes' and features a bass clef with red diamond-shaped notes. The second staff is labeled 'Handbells' and features a treble clef with black circular notes. The third staff is labeled 'Alternate Bells' and features a bass clef with green square-shaped notes.

Alternate bells, such as Petit-Fritsens, bring a contrasting sound and add interesting 'color' to the music. If you only have only one set of bells, you may play all of the parts on one set. Tempo should be relaxed and free, especially when playing the malleted chords. The addition of windchimes before the first note and after the last chord works well.

* The singing bell technique is achieved by using varying densities and textures of wood and/or leather-covered sticks, depending on the size of the bells, and rubbing them around the outside of the rim of the bell with the bell opening facing up.
